INSCRIPTIONS IN GULBARGA.

(By MAJOR T. W. HAIG, I.A.S.)

Gulbarga, which was the capital of the Bahmani kings of the Dekan from 1247 to 1429 A.D., and was in later times an important frontier fortress of the 'Adil Shāhī kings of Bijapur, contains some interesting old buildings, relics of the Bahmanids and the 'Adil Shāhs, many of which bear inscriptions which are worthy of being recorded. I propose to consider these inscriptions in their chronological order.

TRANSLATION.

This blessed majid of God, may He be exalted and blessed, was built in the reign of the founder of buildings and the cycesure of the good fortune of blessings, the lord of kings, 'Ala'u'd-dunyā wa'd-din Bahman Shāh, (may God preserve his kingdom,) by him who hopes for favour in the Court of the Almighty, Saifu'd-daulah Shāh Zakariya, in the year H. 754 (=A.D. 1353). May it be resorted to to all eternity, in virtue of the Great Architect of the house well filled, the famous Ka'bah.

This is, from an historical point of view, the most interesting of the inscriptions at Gulbarga. It records the foundation of a mosque by one who was, apparently, a dervish of some sanctity, but the stone on which it is cut is now broken into four pieces, and lies by an old shrine just without one of the gates of the fort. It is difficult to decipher and I am not satisfied that the readings are correct in every case, but the important part of the inscription, the name and title of the king in whose reign it was cut, is clearly legible, and removes all doubt as to his correct style. The legend which connected the patronymic Bahman with the caste-name Brahman is thus shown to have no foundation in fact.

(2) Next comes a long and well-executed inscription commemorating the completion of the large majid, a building unique among the mosques of India.

TRANSLATION.

In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. God, may He be hallowed and exalted, said, " Verily none buildeth mosques to God but he who believeth in God and in the last day and who prayeth and giveth alms, " to the end of the verse. And the Prophet, on whom be peace, said, " Whoso buildeth a mosque for God for him God buildeth a mansion in Paradise." In accordance, therefore, with the sense of this text of the Qur'ān and the saying of the Prophet, Rafi', the son of Shams, the son of Manšūr, of Qazvin, of God's servants the most in need of His mercy and forgiveness, by His favouring inspiration and exalted grace built this mosque in the reign of the great, the invincible, and honoured king Abū-'l-Muẓaffar Muḥammad Shāh, the Sultan, son of the Sultan, may God strengthen the pillars of his kingdom, soliciting from Him avoidance of (the desire for) notoriety and hypocrisy, and hoping from Him acceptance (thereof) in mercy and approval, on the 4th of the first month of the year 769 (Hijrī) and God knoweth best what is right.

The date corresponds with September 1, 1367 A.D.

(3) The next inscription, which bears the date A.H. 814 (A.D. 1411-12), is the epitaph of one Ḥājī Maḥmūd, son of Ḥājī Ḥusain, of Lāhāi-jān. It is of no interest from an historical point of view, and need not be transcribed here.

I saw a wondrous fort, the like of which there was not among the forts built in this world. May it be fortified by Him to whom belong dominion and power, and may it be protected by Him to whom belong honour and glory and awe and might and grandeur and pride. May it be received under the care of God and the protection of God, and the safeguard of God from the evils of all trials by virtue of كهيعص and by virtue of حمعسق. And there is no strength nor power but by means of God, the High, the Great.

This inscription appears over the Zanjiri gate of the fort and is accompanied by some verses no longer legible. The inscription is much weather-beaten and no date can be deciphered, but I am inclined to assign it to the period of the Bahmani kings.

Date 20/12/56.

Call No. 417.6105/E.9.M.

It is not necessary to give a literal translation of this inscription, which consists largely of pious aspirations and the recitation of bombastic titles. The purport of it is that the bastion in the fort, on the inner face of which the inscription is cut, was built in A.H. 965 (A.D. 1557-58), in the reign of 'Ali 'Ādil Shāh I. of Bijāpūr, by one 'Izzat Khān.

TRANSLATION.

This building was built in the reign of the king 'Ali 'Ādil Shāh, in accordance with orders received, by the slave Zābiṭ Khān, in the year of the Hijrah 981 (A.D. 1573-74).

This inscription is cut on a stone which is now let into the wall of a police station near the Bālā Hīṣār, and it is not possible to say what the building was the erection of which it commemorates.

As parts of this inscription are obliterated it is not possible to give a full translation, but the purport of the inscription is that Babāji Zābiṭ Khān, lieutenant of Aḥsanābād Gulbarga in the absence of the governor, in the reign of 'Ali 'Ādil Shāh I. of Bijāpūr dug the well to which the inscription relates, built two bastions and laid out a space provided with seats in the year 986 of the Hijrah (= A.D. 1578-79). This Zābiṭ Khān has been already mentioned in the foregoing inscription. The conjunction of the Hindu title Bābāji with the Muḥammadan title is peculiar and may perhaps indicate that Zābiṭ Khān was a converted Hindu. He seems to have been deputy for the Khān-i-A'zam, Hamid Khān, Bahmanī, an epithet which seems to denote a claim to descent from the Bahmanī kings.

The well to which the inscription relates is known as the Hār Bāoli, or "Necklace well" and is now in a ruinous state.

The four inscriptions which follow bear no date, but they all belong to the reign of 'Ali 'Ādil Shāh I. of Bijāpūr, who reigned from 965 to 988 A.H. (= A.D. 1557-58—1580).

TRANSLATION.

In the reign of the exalted king, the asylum of the world, the sun of the sky of honour, the victorious, 'Alī 'Adil Shāh, (may God preserve his kingdom and his sovereignty!) Hājī 'Imād Khan, the slave of the royal court, constructed this building.

This inscription belongs to a house, now in ruins, near the well which bears inscription No. (7). The date is no longer legible.

(11) This is an undated inscription consisting only of the names of the twelve Imāms cut on a stone at the head of a tomb. It probably belongs to the reign of 'Alī 'Adil Shāh I. and is interesting only as a relic of the vogue of the Shāhī religion in Bijāpūr.

(12) This inscription is similar to No. (11) but bears the date A.H. 980 (A.D. 1572-73). It is cut on a stone set into the wall of a mosque known as the Bijāpūr Bakḥshī Shāhī's mosque.

(13) The next inscription is one of Ibrahim 'Adil Shāh II.

حضرت نواب کامیاب گردون اقتدار همایون ارفع اقدس اعلیٰ ابراهیم عادلشاه

In translating this inscription it will be unnecessary to translate bombastic and unimportant titles, while others will call for special consideration.

TRANSLATION.

The Nawwāb Ibrahim 'Adil Shāh (II.)—may God perpetuate his kingdom and sovereignty!—having, with his victorious army, made a pilgrimage to the shrine of the saint Sayyid Muhammad Husaini, Glāh Darāz,—may his tomb be hallowed—on the 3rd Muharram A.H. 980 (February 7, 1581) on which occasion he halted at this place, Her Highness Makhdūma-i-Jahān, the mother of the said Nawwāb, caused a wall to be dug and an orchard to be planted here in the month of Muharram A.H. 994 (December-January 1585-86) as an offering.

May the Lord preserve these monuments of the shrine, by His favour and mercy, until the day of resurrection, for the honour of the Prophet, on whom be peace. Amen.

It will be observed that Ibrahim II., although the title 'Adil Shāh is affixed to his name and he is honoured with the ejaculatory prayers proper to the royal title is described as "the Nawwāb." At this time all real power in the state of Bijāpūr was exercised by the famous Cānd Bibī, who is evidently the princess referred to in the inscription by the title Makhdūma-i-Jahān, and described as the young king's "mother." She was in fact his aunt by marriage, but being queen-regent she probably regarded the king as her adopted son, though she appears to have been so jealous of her power as to grudge him the full titles of royalty.

* نظر is a misspelling for نظر

(14) The following inscription is cut on a stone in a ruinous wall, formerly the wall of a garden, in a suburb which seems to have been known as 'Ādilābād, and to have been built by or for Ibrāhīm 'Ādil Shāh II. :—

بنا نمود بیت عادل آباد یکخانه داخل باغ دریائین در عهد

سنه اربع و تسعین و تسعمائه هجریه

TRANSLATION.

In accordance with orders received Bābāji, entitled Zābit Khān, lieutenant, in the governor's absence, of the city of Aḥsanābād (Gulbarga), built a house in 'Ādilābād, within the garden and below * * in the reign of the king Ibrāhīm 'Ādil Shāh (II.), the Ghāzi, in A.H. 994 (A.D. 1586).

There is a hiatus after the word پائین. This Bābāji, "entitled Zābit Khān," has already been mentioned in inscriptions (6), (7), and (8). He seems to have had a long tenure of office as lieutenant-governor of Gulbarga, and was probably the actual governor while the noble who nominally held the appointment spent his time, and revenues, at the capital.

(15) The following inscription, cut on a stone over the gate of the domed building known as Sidi 'Ambar's dome, near the gate below the great garden, is perhaps a relic of Malik 'Ambar's invasion of the 'Ādil Shāhi dominions; but may be the work of another¹ 'Ambar in the 'Ādil Shāhi service :—

چه خورش دید گنبد بنا کرد عنبر
سنه ۱۰۰۸ هجری

The inscription is a hemistich. Its language is inelegant and unidiomatic, but its meaning evidently is "How beautiful appeared the dome built by 'Ambar.—A.H. 1008 (A.D. 1599-1600)."

(16) The following inscription, cut on a stone in the Faṭḥ Burj, or "bastion of victory" is also attributable, I think, to the reign of Ibrāhīm II. though no date is legible :—

الحمد لله رب العالمين والصلوة علي رسوله محمد وآله اجمعين
در عهد سلطنت پادشاه عالم پناه مهر سپهر سرافرازي تاج الدنيا و الدين ابوالفضل

TRANSLATION.

This bastion of the twelve-yard gun was built in the reign of the victorious Ibrahim 'Adil Shah (II.),— may his kingdom be preserved for ever,— by Barah Malik, the son of Malik Sandal, in the year H. 1033 (A.D. 1623-24).

Barah Malik was probably a country-born Abyssinian.

(18) The following inscriptions, consisting only of the name of the bastion and pious ejaculations, are cut on stones of the bastion known as burj-i-naurus :—

برج نورس

یا بدرج یا بدرج

I attribute them to the reign of Ibrahim owing to the obvious reference to the name in the ejaculation هو الخلیل.

(19) The following inscription, of the reign of Muhammad 'Adil Shah, is cut on a stone in the wall of the bastion known as Ghagiyali burj, or "the clock-maker's bastion" :—

May this shrine always remain open in prosperity. This palace is an offering to the saint, the upholder of the descendants of Hasan and Hussein, the support and refuge of the people of the Dekan, the cherisher of his slaves, lord of the faith and the world, Sayyid Muhammad Husaini, Ghaṭ Darā, (having been built) in the reign of the victorious king Sulṭān Muḥammad 'Adil Shah, the Ghāzi,— may his kingdom be preserved for ever,— and the founder of it was the humblest of the slaves of his court (or, "of this shrine") 'Alī Rāzā, the son of Muḥammad Aqā. A.H. 1058 (A.D.)

The mistake made in inscription No. (13) is repeated here, the word نذر being misspelt نظر.

(20) The following inscription is cut on a stone in the Kala Pakār burj, or "bastion of the black hill" :—

O Protector!

O Protector!

In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate.

The kingdom is God's.

In the beginning of the reign of the King Sikandar 'Adil Shāh, the Qādīrī, the Ghāsi, the son of 'Alī 'Adil Shāh (II.), by the order of the Āsaf of the age, Khavāss Khān, minister of the kingdom, issued in the year H. 1083 (A.D. 1672-73), the humblest of the slaves of the Court, Sidi Sumbul, son of Malik 'Ambar, Subadar and Havaladar, built this splendid bastion, which is named the Sikandar bastion, in the year H. 1084 (A.D. 1673-74).

Couplet.

He fares well in both worlds
 Who benefits the people of God.

After the founding of the bastion there were built, within the battlements, a gun-embankment, a dalāruni, and a chamber.

I can find no meaning to fit dūlāvanī here. It may perhaps be the name of a kind of gun.

Khavāṣṣ Khān was the minister who set Sikandar on the throne and the description of Sikandar as the son of 'Alī 'Ādil Shāh was probably intended as an answer to the rumour, fostered by Aurangzib, that Sikandar was supposititious.

The Sidi Sumbul here mentioned was probably a country-born Abyssinian. His father, Malik 'Ambar, is not to be confused with the great Malik 'Ambar, but was probably identical with Malik 'Ambar "the Bijāpūrī," mentioned in the Pādīshāhnāma (i. 521) as being employed with the army of Bijāpūr operating against the imperial army besieging Daulatābād.

(22) The following inscription is cut on a stone which was drawn up from an old well when it was being cleaned. It is not clear to what building it refers:—

(27) The last inscription is merely an epitaph of no historical interest bearing the date A.H. 1288 (A.D. 1871-72).

I desire to express my acknowledgements for valuable assistance towards the compilation of this list of the inscriptions of Gulbarga received from the Nawāb Sayyid Ḥusain Bilgrāmī 'Imādu-'l-Mulk Bahādūr, who has most kindly revised my translations of the Arabic inscriptions, and from the Nawāb Frāmūz Jang Bahādūr, First Ta'aluqdār of Gulbarga, who accompanied me on the occasion of my visit to the fort and very kindly supplied me with rubbings of the inscriptions.

SOME INSCRIPTIONS IN BERAR.

By MAJOR T. W. HAIG, I.A.,

Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department.

I propose in this paper to give an account of such inscriptions in Berar as I have been able to examine. The list is not exhaustive, and in the case of Samskr̥t inscriptions I have been obliged, owing to my ignorance of that language, to content myself with a reference to them, which will, however, be a sufficient indication to other and better equipped workers in the same field of the localities in which they are to be found. It is desirable that there should be a record of the inscriptions which I now bring to notice, for some of them have suffered severely and nearly all continue to suffer from the effects of the weather. The inscriptions can most conveniently be considered topographically.

I. GĀWILGARH.

Gāwil was the old fortress-capital of Berar, Elicpūr being the seat of government. Unfortunately the fort contains no old inscriptions, the earliest being one of Fathu-'llāh 'Imādu-'l-Mulk, the first independent king of Berar. We might have expected to find some record of Ahmad Shāh Bahmani I, who, according to Firishṭa, built the fort in A.D. 1425. The inscription of Fathu-'llāh 'Imādu-'l-Mulk is above the south-western gate of the fort, the Pir Patha (Fath) Darwāza, in the filling of the arch. The stone used has suffered much from the weather, and has scaled to such an extent that only small portions of the inscription are legible. It appears, however, that these portions embody the important part of the inscription. The situation of the inscription is unfortunate. The gate over which it is cut stands at the south-western angle of the fort, at the top of the Gāwil hill, which rises abruptly from the plains, so that the south-west monsoon beats with all its force, throughout the rainy season, on the inscribed stone, which is not protected in any way. It is not easy to say how much longer the existing fragment of the inscription will remain, but it appears to "be too late to adopt any measures for its preservation. So much of the inscription as I have been able, with much difficulty, to decipher, runs as follows:—

• • • • • کتم (?)

الغمداد الملک • • • • • بعد دولت بیغا (?) محمد شاه آنک (آنک)

• • • • • چون فردوس • • • • • بقلعہ گازیل ز سنگ کین

کہ زیر ارست چو دہلی (?) کرر (?) قران • • • • • مسجد جامع نباشد بر سر حوض

کہ ارست پاک چو بیت المقدس و معمر و قدروش بدید بنزد خرد بگفت بیا بیت سرور

It is impossible to give a translation of these fragments, but we may gather from them that Fathu-'llah 'Imādu-l-Mulk "built with the old stones," that is to say repaired, "the jami' masjid at the head of the tank" in the reign of (Shahābu-d-dīn) Mahmūd Shāh Bahmanī. The date of the work is given in the chronogram چو بیا بیت ("Come to the house of joy") and is A.H. 898 (A.D. 1488). Two years later Fathu-'llah 'Imādu-l-Mulk proclaimed his independence. The jami' masjid in Gāwīl, situated "at the head of the tank," is a fine building with a range of seven arches in front, and was originally covered with twenty-one domes in three rows of seven. It was built, evidently with an eye to effect, on the highest knoll in the fort, where the accommodation for it is insufficient. The western wall has consequently fallen down the steep slope of the knoll, carrying with it a complete row of seven domes. From the conformation of the ground it appears likely that Fathu-'llah 'Imādu-l-Mulk found it necessary to repair similar damage, and it may be remarked that the Government of India would do well in following his example.

The use of the Turkish title Ulugh with the ordinary title of Fathu-'llah, who was a Kanarese Hindī by race, and was captured in his boyhood and brought up as a Musalmān, is strange, and perhaps unique.

In the south-western face of the fort there is a fine bastion, known as the barj-i-Bahrām or "bastion of Bahrām." It bears an inscription on a stone slab on the inner side of the wall, which is protected from the weather by a stone coping. The inscription runs as follows:—

بگازیل ساختہ بہرام برجی • • • • • کہ مثل آن ندیدہ چشم ایلم

رساندہ رفعت آنرا بجای • • • • • کہ کہولن در پناہش کرد آرام

چو کردم فکر تاریخش برآمد • • • • • بہ تاریخش تمام آن برج بہرام

* In Gāwīl Bahrām built a bastion

"The like of which the eye of time hath not seen;

"He carried it to such a height

"That the planet Saturn takes his ease in its shelter,

"When I pondered over the date of its construction it was found

"In the words 'that bastion of Bahrām is completed.'"

The chronogram gives the date A.H. 985 (A.D. 1577). It has been ludicrously misread and misinterpreted in the Berar Gazetteer, where, indeed the whole inscription is mistranslated.

By omitting altogether the word آن and by referring تاریخش to نام instead of to رج in spite of the evident meaning of the sentence, the translator has reduced the chronogram to the words بج یرام which give the date A.H. 453 (A.D. 1061). Even then the absurdity was allowed to stand, though it might have been suspected that there was some mistake in an interpretation which made it appear that the bastion was built by a Muslimán little more than half a century after Mahmūd-i-Ghaznavi's first invasion of northern India and nearly two centuries and a half before the first Muhammadan invader appeared in Berar.

Bahrām was evidently an officer in the army of Sayyid Murtaṣā Salavārī, governor and commander-in-chief in Berar under Murtaṣā Nizām Shāh of Ahmadnagar and was probably qalandār of Gāwīl. In A.D. 1577 Murtaṣā Nizām Shāh was expecting that Akbar would march on Berar from Ajmir, and though his apprehensions were premature they justified the expenditure of money and labour on the defences of Gāwīl.

The inner side of a battlement in the outer fort bears an inscription in the Nāgarī or Bālabodh character. The letters are well formed but not deeply cut, and the rough surface on which they were cut has suffered from the effects of the weather. I could not determine, in the short time which I allowed for the examination of this inscription, whether the language of the inscription was Sūbaskṛt or Marāṭhī, but it is probable that the greater part, at least, of the inscription could be deciphered by a good Sanskrit or Marāṭhī scholar with some experience in epigraphy. It appears to be modern, and is probably a relic of the time when the fort was in the hands of the Bhōṭala rajas of Nāgṛ.

II. NARNALA FORT.

The fort of Narnālā, also situate on the southern and highest range of the Gāwīlgarh hills, was formerly almost equal to Gāwīl in importance, and is said by Firishṭa to have been "repaired" when Gāwīl was "built" in A.D. 1425 by Ahmad Shāh Valī Halimant. The following inscriptions are cut over the beautiful Muḥammadī or Māhāll gate of the fort:—

(a) Upper inscription.

فِي تَارِيخِ الْفَتْحِ قَالَ اللَّهُ تَبَارَكَ وَتَعَالَى مَنْ تَخَلَّفَ عَنْ أَمْنَاءِ سَلَةِ الْفَتْحِ وَتَعَالَمَاتِهِ

(a) "On the date of the victory. Saith the Lord God Most High and Exalted, "Whosoever entereth herein is safe (from fear)." The year 892.

Far removed from imperfections is God. There is no god but the one God, and Maḥammad is the prophet of God,— may God bless and save him, and may God bless all the prophets and apostles and the favoured angels. Praise be to the Lord God, the Ruler of the universe. Lord have mercy on the legitimate khālifas, the rightly guided, exalted over others of the believers and Muslims (namely) Abū Bakr the Truthful, 'Umar the Discriminator, 'Uthmān, and 'Alī the approved of God, and Hasan-u-r-Raḡa, and Husain, and all the martyrs of Karbalā, and Hamzah and 'Abbās, and all those who accompanied (the prophet) in his emigration to Madinah, and all those who helped (him there). May the acceptance of God be on them all !"

"Written by Muḥammad 'Abdu-'llāh"

(b) "In the reign of the great and exalted Sulṭān, the ghāṭ, Shāhābu-d-dunyā wa-d-dīn Maḥmūd Shāh, the son of Muḥammad Shāh, the son of Humāyūn Shāh, the son of Ahmad Shāh, the son of Muḥammad Shāh, the ruler, the Bahmanid; may God perpetuate his rule, his kingdom, and his khāṭafat."

"Written by Kamāl Jang."

The words فِي تَارِيخِ الْفَتْحِ ("on the date of the victory") at the beginning of the upper inscription probably refer to the slaughter of the Turki amirs and troops at Bidar at the instigation of Nizām-i-Mulk Bahri, carried out under the orders of Fathu-'llāh 'Imād-i-Mulk, 'Adil Khān the Dakani being in actual command of the Dakani troops. The date of this massacre, from which Yānuī 'Adil Khān the Turk was saved by his friend Fathu-'llāh 'Imād-i-Mulk, is given neither by Firishṭa, nor by the authors of the Burhān-i-Ma'āz the Tabaqat-i-Albiri and the Muntakhabu-l-Labāb, but it appears, from the sequence of the events recorded by these authors, that it occurred in A.H. 892. It is certain that the words cannot refer to the dreadful massacre of Dakanis and Habashis which occurred at the end of this year after their failure to capture Maḥmūd Shāh in his palace.

After the opening words a text of the Qur'ān (sūrah III. iv. 1) is ingeniously used as a chronogram, and gives the date H. 892, which is immediately afterwards expressed in words. It will be observed that the date of the building of this gate, A.D. 1487, is one year earlier than that of the repairs to Gāwliḡarh, which were carried out in 1488, and that Fathu-'llāh 'Imād-i-Mulk proclaimed his independence in 1490. It must not, however, be too readily assumed that these repairs to the principal forts of Berar were a deliberate preparation for rebellion, for the four tarafdar who founded independent dynasties do not appear to have been actuated by any feelings of disloyalty to the Bahmanids. On the contrary we find several instances of their loyalty to the persons of the representatives of that dynasty. Fathu-'llāh himself in A.H. 912 (A.D. 1506), after sixteen years of independent sovereignty, made obeisance to Maḥmūd Shāh Bahmanī at Kulam in the kingdom of Berar. Yānuī 'Adil Shāh always held both treasure and troops at the disposal of Maḥmūd Shāh when he needed assistance, and his son Ismā'īl 'Adil Shāh, on the occasion on which he gave his sister in marriage to Maḥmūd's son Ahmad, treated Maḥmūd as his suzerain, and it would almost seem that nothing but his inability to detach Maḥmūd from the pernicious influence of Barid-i-Mamālik prevented him from abjuring the kingly title and becoming, as his father had been, a simple subject of the Bahmanī king. Even Kāṭim-'llāh, that shadow of a king whose name closes the roll of the Bahmanids, found when he fled, a suppliant exile, to the court of Barhān Nizām Shāh of Ahmadnagar that the glamour of the race of Bahman had not entirely departed. He was treated with exaggerated respect as a royal guest and on some occasions as his host's superior, until Barhān's advisers pointed out to him the folly of lowering his prestige in the eyes of his subjects by doing homage to a youth who could never hope to assert his supremacy. So loth was Salṭan Qulī Qutbu-l-Mulk tarafdar of Gulkunda, to do anything that might savour of treachery against his nominal master that he refused to join the three jarafidars who proclaimed their independence in 1490 and postponed the step until 1512, when there no longer remained the faintest hope that the rois faibles at Bidar would ever free themselves from the bondage of the Barids. It was, in fact, this bondage which drove them to rebellion. All were loyal to the person of their sovereign but none would serve the Barids, who were detested by the Dakan jarafidars as gharib or foreigners, and by the others as upstarts and usurpers. It may be maintained, therefore, that Fathu-'llah in improving his fortresses was preparing to resist the domination of an inferior rather than to rebel against his sovereign.

The lower inscription is principally remarkable for the grotesque inaccuracy of its account of Mahmūd Shāh's descent. In the first place it omits from his pedigree the name of 'Alā'u-d-dīn Ahmad Shāh II., for the Ahmad Shāh mentioned is evidently intended for Shāhāba-d-dīn Ahmad Shāh I., the Fatī, father of 'Alā'u-d-dīn, and in the second place it errs in making Ahmad I., the son of Muhammad Shāh, the fifth king of the dynasty. The paternity of Ahmad I. and Firūz, his elder brother, is not entirely free from doubt. Firāhta makes them sons of Dā'ūd, the fourth king, but I venture to think that I have shown* that the account given in the Burhān-i-Ma'āzīr which makes them the sons of Ahmad Khān, a younger son of the founder of the dynasty, is to be preferred to Firāhta's. In any case there is no ground for believing that they were the sons of Muhammad.

It is said that there was formerly an inscription on the jāmī masjid in the fort, recording the fact that the mosque was built by Mahābat Khān in A.H. 915 (A.D. 1509), but the mosque is now in ruins and the inscription has disappeared.

The following inscription is engraved longitudinally on a gun known as the nau-gaṭi top or "nine-yard gun."

هوالباقی

شاه از رنگ زیب عالم گیر

این توپ نه گزنی است که در عمل دکنیان ساخته اند در این روز

بند درگاه اتلر بیگ بر قلعه نرناله رسیده در ماه

جمادی الاول سنه یکهزار و نود و یک هجری مقدس

باقبال حضرت خدیو زمین و زمان خداوند جهان و جهانیان

پیرو مرشد حقیقی توپ مرقوم را بر زمین استوار نمود

رافعه بهاد داس لایته

The inscription is then continued transversely across the gun, nearer the muzzle —

و یکصد و پنجاه سال است که این توپ بتسخیر درآمد

تا بهذه الایام هیچکس یالهی زمین نکرده بود

* He (God) is the Everlasting One!

The Emperor Aurangzib 'Ālamgir.

This is the gun, nine yards in length, which was cast when the Dakanis ruled, and now the slave of the Imperial Court, Atlū Baig, having arrived at the fort of Narnāla in the month of Jamādī'u-l-Awwal of the year 1090 of the holy Hijrah, by the might of his majesty the lord of the earth and the age, sovereign of the world and its inhabitants, the true spiritual guide mounted the aforesaid gun firmly upon the knoll."

(Written by Prāhād Dās, Kāyath.)

"It is a hundred and fifty years since this gun was captured, and until now nobody ever mounted it on the knoll."

It is evident that Atlū Baig was proud of his achievement. The gun, according to the inscription, was captured in A.H. 941 (A.D. 1534-5).

This cannot have been the date of its capture by the Mughals, for Akbar, who was the first of that dynasty to invade Berar and the Dakan, did not ascend the throne till 1556.

The following inscription is cut on a slab let into the wall of a small masjid in the fort:—

نواب خورشید جاہ
داماد افضل الدولہ بادشاہ
دکن ۱۴ ماہ صفر سنہ ۱۲۹۱ ہجری
آمدہ بودند

I refrain from translating this inscription, for it is of no historical interest, and has its counterpart in inscriptions left by other visitors, scribbled on the walls of the mosque and elsewhere.

III. AKOLA.

Inscriptions at Akola are more numerous than interesting, but merit record for such light as they cast on local history. They are principally to be found on slabs let into the walls of the town and of the citadel, and in some cases are at such a height from the ground and are so weather-beaten that they cannot be reached by the ordinary ladders available or deciphered by means of the best field-glasses. Most of them could probably be deciphered if they could be reached.

The Dahihāndā gate of the town bears the following inscription:—

در عہد پادشاہ اورنگ زیب عالم گیر غازی و جاگیر نواب اسد خان وزیر اعظم
و عمل خواجه عبد اللطیف سنہ چہل و شش جلوس والا
مطابق سنہ یکہزار و یکصد و چہار دہ ہجری اسد گدہ باتمام رسید

"In the reign of the emperor Aurangzib 'Ālamgir, the Qāsi, the Nawwāb Asad Khān, prime minister, being jāgirdār, and Khājā 'Abdu-l-Latif being manager (of the jāgir), in the forty-sixth year of the reign, corresponding with the year H. 1114 (A.D. 1702-3) Asad Garh ('the fort of Asad') was completed."

The Pachburja or "five-fold bastion" bears two inscriptions:—

(a) Upper inscription:—

الله باني

در عهد شاه عالم پادشاه غازي و جاگير
نواب اسد سولت¹ عهده وزراي آصف الدوله
در محل خواجه عید المظیف اختتام یافت
برج نصرت مأب با اسد گده بلب آب ۱۱۴۲

(b) Lower inscription:—

محمد الله على

شد مرمت ياد ينج برج را * در هزار و يكصد و هشتاد و چار
يا الهي اين بنا قائم بود * تا قيامت از براي يادگار

(a) "God is the Founder."

"In the reign of the emperor Shāh 'Ālam, the Ghāzi, the Nawwāb of Hon-like impetuosity 'Umda-i-Vusarā Asafu-d-daulah being *jāgir*dār and Khājā 'Abdu-l-Latif being manager (of the jāgir), the bastion where victory centres and Asadgarh on the river bank were completed, A.H. 1122 (A.D. 1710)."

(b) "Muhammad—God—'Alī."

"The base of the five-fold bastion was repaired

In A.H. 1184 (A.D. 1769-70).

O God! may this building stand fast

Till the day of resurrection, as a memorial."

A bastion in the citadel bears two inscriptions:—

(a) Upper inscription:—

در عهد محمد اکبر شاه پادشاه غازي جاگير

• • • •
• • • •
• • • •

"In the reign of the emperor Muhammad Akbar Shāh, the Ghāzi, * * * being *jāgir*dār * * *."

This inscription is at a considerable height from the ground, and is also partly obliterated by lichen. The whole inscription would probably be legible if the stone were cleaned and examined closely. The Akbar referred to is evidently Akbar II. (A.H. 1221—1235=A.D. 1806-1820).

(b) Lower inscription:—

چون صالح محمد خان * * * قدم فرسود
* * * * *
این برج مزین تر از قصر فریدون شد

All that this reading tells us is that the bastion was built or repaired in the time of Šālih Muḥammad Khān, who seems to have been jagirdār of Akola in the reign of Akbar II. Long and careful study might possibly elicit more from this confused and weather-beaten tablet.

The Dihli gate or Mokāṣā Fā bears two inscriptions, one in Persian on its northern side and the other in Marāṭhī on its southern side :—

(a) Inscription on northern side :—

بمسن سعي گولند آيا شد مرتب باب دهلي
بتاريخ ۱۷ ربيع الثاني سنة ۱۲۰۱ هجري مطابق
سنة ۱۱۹۶

"By the good efforts of Govind Appā the Dihli gate was built on the 17th Rabi' u-Šāw A.H. 1201 (A.D. 1787) corresponding with the Faḡl year 1196."

(b) Inscription on southern side :—

स्मृति श्री नृप शालिवाहन शके सचामे पै अष्टकीं
जी कीं पुण्यतमा पराभव महा संवत्सरा नाम कीं ।
त्या वर्षीं शुभस्थान घोर नगरी प्राकील नावे बरी

मोकाशी अधिकार पावन जमी नामचित्या वेमिसी
जाणावे सकलीं सदी दितपणे मोकासवेसीपसी ॥ २ ॥

TRANSLATION.

"In the happy year 1708 of the Šālivāhan era, known by the auspicious name of Parābhav Sadvataam :—in that year, in the blessed and great city of Akola of good fame, where are gathered pious men and holy men, also Brāhmanas and leaders of Mahānubhavas,—to the north of that city was built a large gate of great beauty, as also a ghāt. The authority of Mokāṣā is sacred, (therefore) let this gate be known by all at all times by the name Mokāsa-ves."

The year 1708 of the Šālivāhan era, called Parābhav, corresponded to the Faḡl year 1195-96, to the Christian year 1786-87 and to the Hīrī year 1201 (nearly). The Hīrī date given corresponds to February 7th, 1787, which is the date of the completion of the gate and the ghāt.¹

The bastion known as the Faḡl Burj has the following inscription :—

بمسن لطيف و جمال لطيف * نواين برج محکم مرتب شد
بطرح الف سال تمام از * بخوان فتح برج محکم اساس
فر محمد پادشاه اورنگزیب عالم گیر جائیز نواب اسد خان عمل خواجه عبد اللطيف

¹ For the reading and translation of this inscription I am indebted to the kindness of Messrs. D. V. Bhagwat, V. M. Mahajan, and S. A. Adhikari.

The meaning of the first couplet with its reference to the name of the builder of the Īsh Burj Khwāja 'Abdu-l-Laṭīf, is clear, but there seems to be something wrong in the second hemistich of the second couplet, which does not scan and gives a date which is manifestly wrong. Something has probably been omitted by a careless sculptor, who has also omitted the conjunction y from the prose inscription, the translation of which runs as follows:—

"In the reign of the emperor Aurangzib 'Ālamgir, the Nawwāb Asad Khān being jāgīrdār, and Khwāja 'Abdu-l-Laṭīf being manager (of the jāgīr) * * * A.H. 1113 (A.D. 1701-02)."

The last figure of the date is not very clear. It might be either 2 or 4, as well as 3, but the difference would be unimportant.

The western side of the wall of the ṭagāh at Akola bears the following inscription:—

در عهد پادشاه اورنگ زیب عالم گیر غازی و جاگیر نواب اسدخان
وزیر اعظم بنا کرده خادم المسلمین خواجه عبد اللطیف
سنة یکہزار و ہشتاد و شصت و ہجری عیدہا پانچام رسید

"In the reign of the emperor Aurangzib 'Ālamgir, the Ghāzī, the Nawwāb Asad Khān, prime minister, being jāgīrdār, the ṭagāh built by Khwāja 'Abdu-l-Laṭīf, the servant of the Muslims, was completed in the year H. 1116 (A.D. 1704-05).

IV. BALĀPUR.

The inscription over the principal gate of the outer fort at Balāpur is not easily accessible, and is so weather-beaten that it would probably be illegible, even if it could be examined closely. According to the Berar Gazetteer this inscription recorded the fact that the fort was completed in A.D. 1757 (A.H. 1170-71) by Ismā'īl Khān, the first Nawwāb of Eliopūr under the Nizāms, but the Berar Gazetteer is not a safe guide in such matters. It seems probable, however, that the fort was either thoroughly repaired, or "completed" about this time.

The following inscription is cut over the architrave of the Rauṣah Ma'fiḍ, adjoining which is the tomb of the saint Manṭavi Ma'yūm Shāh:—

رستم دیزان کہ زیر گرز او رستم چو زال * بست رخت سفر عقبی امر حق را امتثال
خواست تا گردد ظہیر الحق و الدینش ظہیر * زان نمرود منزل اول جہار ذوالکمال
خلف از مرزا امان و شیر بیگ نامدار * مثلش مصروف بر حسنات و فیضت و نوال
مسجدی کش پایہ بر کرمی و فرشش ہجر عمرش * بس وسیع و بس رفیع و درر معراجش ہلال
ساخت بہر معبد اہل تقی از باب دین * تا بیابد در جہان قصر برین و بیمثال
سال اتمام و بنایش گفت هاتف از سروش * بود از شجرت ہزار و ہم صد و پنجاہ سال

"The Rustam of the age, beneath whose mace Rustam would have been as an old woman,
Departed on his journey to the next world in obedience to God's command.

He desired that he who was known as 'the Supporter of God and of the faith' should become his supporter

And for that reason made the neighbourhood of (the shrine of) that lord of perfection his first heavenward stage.

His successors are (he who is known as) Mirzā Amān and Shīr Baig the famous,

Whose favour is spent in good works, generosity, and benefits:

A mosque which was founded on the earth and of which the pavement resembled the highest heaven

Right spacious, right lofty, with the new moon for the arch of its prayer-niche,
He built as a place of worship for the pious, the holders of the faith,
That he might obtain in heaven a lofty and unequalled palace,
An angel's voice declared the year of its foundation and completion, A.H. 1150."

These bombastic and insipid verses tell us nothing except that one Mirzā Amān, entitled Shir Baig, built the mosque, which by no means deserves the praise bestowed upon it, as a memorial to his father, and in the neighbourhood of the tomb of a saint named Zahīru-l-Haqq or Zahīru-d-dīn, in A.H. 1150 (A.D. 1737-38). I have not been able to ascertain anything about the founder.

The following lines are inscribed over the gate of the jāgīrdār's hateli:—

ز هجرت هزار و صد و پانزده * شد کین در قادری ساخته
بهر که در این دهر کشد سرچو تیغ * بر در قادر نهد الدریغ

The verses, as written, do not scan, but the reading is quite clear. The first word of the second hemistich of the first couplet should be شد, ob metrum, and this idiom, though inelegant, is characteristically Indian. The verses may be translated as follows:—

"From the Hijra one thousand one hundred and fifteen years
Had passed when this Qādiri gate was built.
For each one who in this world bears his head erect, like a (drawn) sword
And lowers it not at the gate of the Almighty, (we can but say) 'Alas!'"
The builder of this gate was probably one 'Abdu-l-Qādir, concerning whom I could ascertain nothing.

V. PĀTUR SHAIKH BĀBŪ.

The inscriptions over the gates of this small town are now illegible.

The following inscription is cut on a slab above the arch of the outer gate of the shrine of Shaikh Bābū:—

این عمارت ساخته بزمان * خان خانان ابن بیوم خان
از کرم کامیاب عالیشان * بود حاکم نعیم بر درویشان
در سنه هزار و پانزده

"This building was erected in the time of the Khān-i-Khānān, the son of Bairam Khān, (and) by means of the liberality of that successful and exalted man.

He was a ruler who was kind to darvīshes. A.H. 1015 (A.D. 1606-07)."

In the interior of Shaikh Bābū's shrine the chronogram خالدین فیها gives the date of the saint's death as A.H. 791 (A.D. 1388).

It is said that there was formerly a Sanskrit inscription, cut on the rock above the two small caves in the hill near the town, but that the portion of the rock which bore the inscription fell away. The inscription, if it ever existed, has completely disappeared. There are, however, inscriptions on the capitals of the pillars within the caves, but I cannot decipher them.

VI. MALKĀPŪR.

The gate called Osadī-er at Malkāpūr has this inscription over it :—

کمال الباب فی عمل محمد معالی خان سنه ۱۱۴۶

"This gate was finished during the governorship of Mahammad Ma'ālī Khān, in A.H. 1142 (A.D. 1729)."

VII. MEHĀR.

Over the gate called the Ma'min Darwāza at Mehkar is the following inscription :—

ایما المؤمنین اخوة فاسلحوا بین اخیرتکم و تقوا الله لعلکم ترحمون

"Truly ye, the faithful, all are brethren. So keep peace between both brothers and fear God. He will take you among the blessed." (Qur'ān c. xxvi.)

The two last words of the text are utilized as a chronogram, and give the date A.H. 894 (A.D. 1488). This is another instance of a walled town being repaired just before Fathu'l-lāh 'Imād-ī-Mulk assumed the sovereignty of Berar.

VIII. SHAKARKHELĀ OR FATHKHELĀ.

The following inscription is cut over the mosque at Shakarkhelā, named Fathkhelā by Āṣaf Jah Nizām-ī-Mulk after his victory over Mubārīz Khān in A.D. 1724.

یافت از لطف خداوند جهان * مسجد ترتیب چون دار القرار
خواستم تاریخ اتمامش ز عقل * گفت باد خانه حق یابدار

"By the grace of the Lord of the world

This mosque was built like the eternal abode.

I inquired of my mind the date of its completion

And (my mind) replied 'May the house of God endure'."

The chronogram contained in the last hemistich gives the date A.H. 989 (A.D. 1581).

IX. ROHANKHEĀ.

The following inscription is cut on the mosque at Rohankheā :—

خداوند خان آنکه دست سخایش * نمود از جهان * سوی فلک
* * * * *
چو شد ثانی کعبه تاریخ ار را * بگفتا فلک ثانی کعبه بیشک

The inscription is so dilapidated that it is not possible to give a complete translation, but fortunately all that is interesting has been preserved. The mosque was built by Khudāvand Khān in the year H. 990 (A.D. 1582). This mosque is very similar to that at Fathkhelā, just noticed, and was built in the year following that in which the Fathkhelā mosque was completed. There is little doubt that both are the work of the same architect and the same builder. The Rohankheā inscription gives the name of the builder as Khudāvand Khān, and the allusion to his name in the Fathkhelā inscription is unmistakable.

This Khudāvand Khān was an Abyssinian noble in the service of the Ahmadnagar kingdom at the end of the tenth century of the Hġrī era. He embraced the Mahdavi doctrines, and had great influence as one of the principal supporters of Jamāl Khān. At the battle of Rohankheā in A.H. 999 (A.D. 1590-91) when Jamāl Khān, having under his care the young king Ismā'īl Nizām Shāh, opposed Burhān Nizām Shāh, Ismā'īl's father, Khudāvand Khān held a considerable command in Jamāl's army, and, after its defeat, bore Ismā'īl away from the field.

Isma'il was, however, pursued and captured by his father and Khudāvand Khān was beheaded as a traitor and a heretic.

This Khudāvand Khān is not to be confused with the Khudāvand Khān, also an Abyssinian, who was governor of the province of Mahūr or Southern Berar about a century earlier.

X. BĀRSĪ TĀKĪ.

At Bārsī Tākī in the Akola District there is a fine Hemādpanth temple with a Sanskrit inscription giving the date Saka 1098 (A.D. 1179) which is believed by Mr. Cousens to be the date of the construction of the temple.

XI. SĪRĀR.

Sīrār in the Bāslin District has a fine temple of Antariksa Pārvānātha belonging to the Digambara Jaina community. It has a Sanskrit inscription with a date which has been read as Sakrat 1334 (A.D. 1406). Mr. Cousens believes that the temple was built at least a hundred years before that time.

I much regret that I have not had an opportunity of examining the inscriptions of Elīpār of which, I believe, there are several, or of examining the ruins of Sulṭān Murād's town of Shāhpār near Balāpār, which probably contain some.

AN INSCRIPTION IN THE FORT OF DAULATĀBĀD.

(By Major T. W. HAIN, I.A.)

At the foot of the fine column known as the Cand Minar in the Daulatābād fort is a small mosque, in the south wall of which is a stone slab bearing the following extraordinary inscription in Persian doggerel:—

بودست یکی بزرگ شاهی • بر مسند سلطنت چو ماهی
 بس معشقم و غیور و دانا • کس را چه مجال لا و لا
 در معرض که درس گوید • جمشید سخن بقرص گوید
 احمد شاه بهمنیست نامش • چه جای جم و چه جانش

TRANSLATION.

"There was a great king seated on the royal throne like the moon in the sky, powerful he was, high-minded, and wise; none was bold enough to dispute his commands. In the place where instruction was given Jamahid himself repeated the words, "Fear him." His name was Ahmad Shāh Bahmanī; what room was there (before him) for Jamahid and his cup? A son he has who is not in the sky; he dwells beyond all doubt in the province of Bidar. Sultān 'Alā'u-d-dīn is his name, whose words are sweeter than honey. There was also, may be, a servant standing ever in the king's presence, his words were like sugar, he had two brilliant eyes, his waist, slender as a reed, was girded, and he stood afar off. When the Sultān's glance fell on him he called down a hundred blessings on the king. One day the king called this servant to him, was gracious to him, and praised him; he said, "I delight in thee with my heart and soul, and I bestow Daulatābād on thee as a choice gift. I pray the Lord that thou mayst remain in Daulatābād with a joyful heart till the day of resurrection." The slave was a great and holy man—Parviz, the slave of the king. A farmān was drawn up in accordance with the king's order, which runs by night no less than by day. When this was sealed with a ruby-coloured seal the ensign of the fish was bestowed on the slave, and they combed his hair and immediately allowed him to set forth. He came to the district of Daulatābād and all his brethren rejoiced: they laid the foundation of a building in the midst of the dew. Its construction occupied three years,—to say more would be vexatious. As for the date of the erection of the column of Daulatābād, it was completed in A.H. 849 (A.D. 1445). The building was like a nosegay of roses and was built by the order of Parviz, the son of Qaranfal."

At the time when this inscription was cut 'Alā'u-d-dīn Ahmad Shāh, tenth king of the Bahmanī dynasty and son of the Ahmad Shāh, mentioned in the fourth couplet, was reigning at Bidar. The slave mentioned in the inscription was evidently, from his father's contemptuous name of Qaranfal ("a clove"), a Habashī, or at least half a Habashī, and belonged, therefore, to the party of the Dakanis, with whom the Habashīs always made common cause, as opposed to that of the "Foreigners," which was composed of Arab, Persian, Turkī, and Mughal adventurers. The bombastic and ridiculous inscription of Parviz may perhaps be of use in fixing the date of two important events in the history of the Bahmanī dynasty, the disastrous expedition to Sangameshwār in the Konkan under the command of Khalaf-i-Rusn-i-Bagri and the subsequent massacre of the foreigners by the Dakanis at Oikan. The date of these events is variously given as A.H. 850 (=A.D. 1446) by Firāqī, A.H. 858 (=A.D. 1454) by the author of the Burhān-i-Ma'āzīr, and A.H. 849 (= A.D. 1445) by Nizamu-d-din Ahmad. The inscription furnishes good grounds for believing that the last named date, which is the date of the inscription, is correct. Khalaf-i-Hasan-i-Baqī, entitled Maliku-t-Tajjar, one of the leaders of the foreign party and the most powerful noble in the Bahmani kingdom, was farafdar of Daulatābād until he fell in the jungles of the Konkan. After his death the remnant of the foreigners in his army were massacred at Cākan, where they had been besieged for some time by the Dakanis under Rāja Rustam Nizamu-l-Mulk Ghori and Sālār Hamza Mushira-l-Mulk who represented them to the Sultān as traitors who had wilfully jeopardized in the Konkan the safety of the whole of the royal army and had retreated to Cākan in order that they might readily transfer their services to the Sultān of Gujarāt. The foreigners meanwhile endeavoured to represent the true state of affairs to the king, but their messengers were either intercepted on the road to the capital or on their arrival they were refused admittance to the royal presence by the Dakanis who, in the absence of the foreign nobles and troops, surrounded 'Alā'u-d-din Ahmad. After the massacre at Cākan Qāsim Beg Saif Shikan, a foreign noble who had escaped the fate of his companions, succeeded, after infinite difficulties in making his way to Bidar, where he gained an audience of the king and told him the true story of the conspiracy against the foreigners. The king was furious at the deception which had been practised on him and the Dakanī minister who had prevented the presentation of the petitions of the foreigners was executed. Qāsim Beg Saif Shikan received the coveted title of Maliku-t-Tajjar and was appointed to succeed Khalaf-i-Hasan as farafdar of Daulatābād, whereby the machinations of the Dakanis were brought to naught. But between the time of the departure of Khalaf-i-Hasan for Saugameshwar and the arrival at Daulatābād of the new farafdar an interval of little less than a year must have elapsed, and it was probably during this period that Parwiz the African slave recorded his insolent boast. The powers of the farafdars in their provinces were at that time almost absolute, and it is highly improbable that any farafdar would have permitted such an inscription as this to be set up in his provincial capital. During the interval between the death of Khalaf-i-Hasan and the appointment of Qāsim Beg the Dakanis and Habaabis were all powerful in the faraf of Daulatābād, and it seems likely that Parwiz, who may originally have been sent from Bidar to Daulatābād to supervise the building of the Cand Minār and the masjid at its base, took advantage of his party's accession to power to inscribe himself lord of Daulatābād, and ensured the permanence of the record by building it into the wall of a mosque, whence none could remove it without the risk of incurring the guilt of sacrilege.

'Alā'u-d-dīn Ahmad Shāh
Bahmanī

Tewari

(4) INSCRIPTION ON THE HEADSTONE OF THE TOMB OF NIKNAH KHAN, SITUATED IN AN ENCLOSURE ON THE FLINTH OF THE TOMB OF IBRAHIM QUTB SHAH.

This decree to be obeyed by the world, commencing in munificence, and this order, issuing like the rays of the sun, originating in mercy, obtained the honour of promulgation from the Court filled with (the attributes of) the Shahisai, and is to the following effect:—

Be it known to the headmen, the accountants, and the cultivators of the village of Mangalwaram in the pargana of Janwal, otherwise known as Hasanabad, they being in expectation of our royal favours, that we, of our royal generosity, in which all our devoted subjects have a part, have, from the beginning of the year H. 1074, set apart the revenues of the said village as an endowment for the almshouse, the lights, the reciters of the Qur'an, and the servants attached to the shrine of Niknah Khan, whose sins are forgiven and who is now in Paradise, in order that the revenues may be devoted to and expended on these objects until the time of the appearance of the Lord of the Age (the Mahdi), may the blessings of God, the bounteous king, be on him! Now let our officers and servants, the accountants of parganas, the shaukarnas, and the headmen and accountants of villages in the above-mentioned pargana know that the said village is assigned for the expenses of the almshouse, the lights, the servants, and the reciters of the Qur'an attached to the shrine of the person mentioned, whose sins are forgiven, in order that they may, without excuse, see that they are devoted to this purpose and recognize this order as a complete injunction and most strict enjoinder; and if anybody should disobey this farman, which has equal force with the decrees of fate, he will be overtaken by the curse of God and the imprecation of the prophet. (Here follows a passage which is not clearly decipherable). Dated the 12th of Jamad-uz-Zani A.H. 1084 (=September 25, A.D. 1673). The death of Niknah Khan, whose sins are forgiven, occurred on the 10th of Zi Hijjah, A.H. 1083 (=March 30, A.D. 1673.)

The unanimous inclination of Her Highness, who increases the prosperity of the faithful and chaste family. Khānum Aghā, the daughter of Mir Magyud Ali Tabatabā, has ever been directed to raising the columns of all descriptions of (buildings for the) benefit of all people, both gentle and simple. Therefore, having in view the end of things and the conclusion of all earthly tasks, she has been pleased to construct a tank in the neighbourhood of Khairābād, in order that all living things may be comforted thereby, and that the continual reward of this good work may remain throughout time until the resurrection and may benefit and assist her; and at this time she has presented this tank to the noble Sayyid Shāh Khundgar, the son of the exalted Sayyid Muḥammad, the Husaini. We have decreed this in the year H. 1034 (= A.D. 1624-25.)

The object of this gift is a memorial of an which may remain,
 For I see no hope of continuance in existence.

This inscription is repeated in the pavilion at the N. E. end of the tank, but lines 8 and 9 are there omitted.

Khānum Aghā was the wife of Mirzā Muḥammad Amin, sixth son of Ibrāhīm Qutb Shāh and father of Muḥammad Qutb Shāh.

The Lord of the world and king of kings.
 In whose reign the good man saw that which was good.
 He who gives ease to hearts, and at the same time rends souls in twain.
 When his ruby lips open in speech.

Who has made this earth the envy of Paradise.
By displaying in it his own face, the rose garden of Paradise.
By his own exalted order built a mosque under the roof of which one would say that

O, God, grant that, so long as the sun and the moon may shine, the sun of his prestige may continue to shine. His worthy minister is the factor of the State (Mukhtār-ul-Mulk, better known as Sālār Jang), who in all circumstances desires the good. Colonel Davidson was the good-hearted ambassador, possessed of honour and dignity. This bridge, which resembles the arch of the seventh hall of heaven, was built after the design of Mr. Mart; the straight way over the river Mūsī; and from this distich one may ascertain the date of its completion.
